In order to support the government's gradual shift from relief towards recovery and resilience and in line with the new Resident Coordinator's vision for the UN Country Team in Jordan, the Country Office has launched the 'Response, Recovery and Resilience Unit' on 1st September 2014.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE ZAATARI REFUGEE CAMP

The day after the camp: self-resilience means business

In April 2014, UN WOMEN forged a new partnership with ILO to initiate a pilot project for Syrian women refugees in Zaatari. Titled, "My Business, My Life", the training focused on the provision of basic business skills, looking at ways for women to start and manage income-generating activities within the refugee community. As a result, women were empowered to be self-reliant in preparation of "the day after the camps".

"This course helped me to develop my skills and has given me more confidence. As a woman with a lot of children, I have learnt skills that have given me the confidence to rely on myself and be independent. I didn't previously have any exposure but now I feel like I know what it means to be a pioneer" affirmed one of the 20 participants in the pilot workshop held in the UN Women-run Oasis in the camp.

UN Women contributes to the inter-agency AMANI campaign

Running from April to December 2014, UN Women is conducting a series of activities as part of the inter-agency campaign AMANI ("My safety") which aims at raising awareness among the Syrian refugees of protection concerns and responses within their communities. Based on the story of a girl named "Amani", who arrives in Jordan with her family as a refugee, the campaign builds on protection messages for children and parents.

It's graduation time at the Women and Girls Oasis!

On 26 June 2014, UN Women commemorated World Refugee Day with the graduation ceremony of the vocational and life-skills trainings organized in the Women and Girls Oasis of Zaatari refugee camp. Around 56 enthusiastic and optimistic women were awarded with the certificates stating that they have successfully completed the beautician and business-cycle workshops. As part of the Women's Economic Empowerment programme, students were provided with in-kind grants to start their own business.

What makes our interventions in the camp innovative? Through this programme, UN Women provides a multi-dimensional interventions', whereby life skills, GBV awareness, civic engagement, economic empowerment and self-reliance opportunities are offered to Syrian women refugees.

In focus: UN Women provides hygiene kits and reproductive health training to women in Zaatari camp and in host communities

As part of its support to vulnerable Jordanian women - and to help filling a gap in the distribution of non-food items - UN WOMEN used CERF funds to procure, assemble and distribute hygiene kits during to Holy month of Ramadan.

A first batch of 1000 kits was delivered in July to the Moroccan hospital within the camp. In the following months, another 1,000 kits were released to ACTED for a further distribution in other districts. A series of activities were organized in collaboration with ACTED and Save Children Jordan, covering issues related to personal hygiene, food safety, breast feeding, complimentary feeding, and feeding during illness. UN Women also partnered with the Jordanian

Women's Union for the distribution of more hygienic kits in Jordan's northern governorates. Also on these occasions, distributions were complemented by awareness raising sessions. By discussing issues pertinent to both groups, both communal awareness and social cohesion were strengthened.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM HOST COMMUNITIES AND POVERTY POCKETS

UN Women awards women' microfinance projects in Al-Mafraq Governorate

On 10th September, UN Women Jordan awarded 20 women, who successfully started their microfinance projects after receiving a loan earlier this year. This event was part of the broader regional project "Spring Forward" founded by the EU, which aims at increasing the economic participation of women living in rural areas in the South Mediterranean region.

Participating women come from four poverty pockets, marked by a poverty rate that can reach 75%, especially among female-headed households. By starting small income generating projects, these women will have the chance to improve their life as well as the one of their families.

"We believe such effort would enhance women's economic participation in the local communities, by creating income-generating opportunities, which eventually will lead to alleviate poverty in the poorest areas in Al-Mafraq Governorate", affirmed Mr. Belsito, UN Women Jordan Representative.

UN Women signs an agreement with the Greater Zarqa Municipality

During an official municipal council session held on 30th September, Mr. Emad Al-Momani, Mayor of the Greater Zarqa Municipality, and our Representative, Mr. Giuseppe Belsito, signed a MoU in order to support women and girls living in the Zarqa Municipality. The agreement is designated to support municipal authorities in raising awareness about gender equality and women's empowerment through a number of joint initiatives and programmes, including to enhance the political and economic participation of women at the municipal level.

Within this framework, the Greater Zarqa Municipality and UN Women Jordan will have the opportunity to establish a permanent consultation forum of dialogue to exchange data and information and, therefore, to develop better targeted interventions in the area.

"UN Women will work in Zarqa to ensure the economic empowerment of the most marginalized" affirmed Mr. Belsito.

Knowledge gateway

UN Women Jordan continues to be the referral agency to analyze and present data and information related to status of women in the Kingdom. With two publications launched in June 2014, the Country Office serves as knowledge gateway on overlooked women's issues both in the humanitarian as well as in the development sphere.

UN Women and the Ministry of Social Development launch of Gender Perspective Study on Jordanian Host Communities.

Held under the patronage and at the presence of Her Excellency, Mrs. Reem Abu Hassan, Minister of Social Development, UN Women launched on 22 June the gender perspective study titled Beyond the Camps: Impact of the Syrian refugee influx on Jordanian Host Communities. A trailblazing initiative by the Country Office to examine the impact of the Syrian refugee crisis on Jordanian host communities. With more than 610,000 Syrian refugees hosted by Jordan, women and girls are particular vulnerable to increasing scarcity and rising tensions, and the findings show that issues of sexual and gender-based violence (SGBV) among Jordanians have increased.

"This study represents a useful tool I can actually use in my cabinet to reflect the voices of Jordanian and Syrians, especially women". "When we talk about social cohesion, we need to hear the voices of women" affirmed HE Abu Hassan. The event was attended by participants from the donors community, national institutions, international NGOs and the civil society.

UN Women Jordan launches the very first national study on "Jordanian Women in the ICT Sector"

On 25th June, UN Women Jordan and the Ministry of Information and Communications Technology launched the study "Jordanian Women in the ICT Sector", the very first of its kind ever presented in the Kingdom! As part of a broader project founded by USAID- Achieving E-Equality in the ICT sector- the study evaluates and illustrates the status of women in this particular economic sector, while highlighting promising entrepreneurship and business incubators.

Building upon the previous studies conducted in 2002 and 2007, the study presents a number of recommendations to build Jordanian women's capacities and capabilities, enhance their skills, and promote their integration in the ICT workplace.

"ICT is one of Jordan's gold mines, where women can be the key players in reaping the benefits of this economic sector" affirmed Mr. Giuseppe Belsito, UN Women Jordan Representative.

Lifting up women's voices: early marriage play performance in Zaatari

On 13th August, the UN Women in partnership with the Jordanian Women's Union have displayed a show of the play "Because I was still a little girl" in Zaatari Camp. The theatrical performance is part of the Norwegian-funded joint project between UN Women, UNFPA and UNICEF "Hemayati: promoting women and girls' health and well-being", which aims at involving women and girls in cultural activities as a means of reflection, dialogue and awareness on early marriage and its effects on women, girls and society by presenting personal experiences on stage. The actual performance was followed by a very interactive discussion with the audience that, due to the conservative nature of their background, was supportive of early marriage as a way to protect girls.

Post 2015 Development Agenda...

thematic consultations envisaged for this phase and titled "Combat stereotypes to ensure gender equality and decrease geographical disparities; reduce poverty and ensure equal access to social services". Held on 22nd June, by other agencies in terms of number of participants from UN Agencies CSOs and government, issues discussed and recommendation by the participants.
